

Loopy by Binder

On the right, you'll find a kind of loopy map. Each clue answer is to be entered into its indicated row or column, but can start in any of those cells, and may also be entered reversed, looping back around at the edge of the grid. For example, ANSWER might be entered as ERANSW or SNAREW. Half of the entries are special (in a way to be determined) and result in some special grid cells.

Once you're finished, it's time to travel around the grid visiting those cells! Travelling eastward from the left edge, you'll encounter a 3-letter word describing this whole rigmarole, then a 3-letter word for something loopy - together these words describe the shape of the grid. Travelling southward from the top edge a certain distance, you'll encounter a "complete" hyphenated word (with 3 parts), and continuing even further in this direction reveals an incomplete path to escape this loopy map.

	A	B	C	D	E	F
1
2
3
4
5
6

Rows

1. One who's fishing for a lover of modified wheels?
2. Put off by joyous stripping? I don't mind! (3 wds)
3. Left hurriedly, yanked from a publication (2 wds)
4. Missing an organ, is a palace ransacked before the common era?
5. Oceans apart, some water vessels ...
6. ... behaved like a sub - now I'm pedalling, essentially

Columns

- A. Harassing Seurat and others in Paris
- B. Newspaper boss, after day with bad back, wilted
- C. David who starred in Selma and Nightingale and even Holy Hell, Dogwood!
- D. Explorer on children's TV stopping almost nine fauna found in the Safari Zone
- E. Name heard in Egypt's modern art openings introducing retrospective couples
- F. Pepsi (replacing sulfur with tritium) can start helping with digestion